Keystone gas plant opened

By a Staff Writer

DAMMAM, Nov. 28 — King Khaled's opening of the gas processing plant at Juaymah Thursday, left the Kingdom two more years to tap the entire gas production estimated at more than two billion cubic meters a day.

The plant, which actually began operations last March, separates gas associated with the production of crude oil into various components such as methane, ethane, and liquefied petroleum gas (LPG). The entire gas-gathering program, which will be completed by mid-1982, aims to collect some 3.4 billion cubic feet of gas that otherwise would be flared into the atmosphere.

Sheikh Ahmad Zaki Yamani, minister of petroleum and mineral resources, said in Juaymah Thursday that "our hearts have been burning" along with the flared gas. He added that what was flared was equivalent to more than 700,000 barrels of crude oil.

The ceremony on Thursday at the Juaymah plant was attended by Prince Abdullah, second deputy premier and commander of the National Guard, Prince Sultan, minister of defense and aviation, Prince Muhammad bin Saud al-Kabir, Prince Faisal bin Saud, other members of the royal family, cabinet ministers and senior officials of Aramco, who are installing the entire gas project on behalf of the Saudi government.

Sheikh Yamani said that the Juaymah plant will be a central part of the petrochemical industries being planned for the new industrial city of Jubail, some 30 miles to the north. The ethane produced at Juaymah, for example, will be piped to Jubail and there provide the valuable feedstock for the world-scale petrochemical and fertilizer plants.

Despite this obvious domestic benefit of associated gas, a large part will also be exported in the form of LPG in order to enhance the Kingdom's export earnings. Petroleum, the Kingdom's oil and gas agency, has already signed some forty long-term contracts with foreign companies covering around 7 million tons a year of LPG, a significant percentage of which will be shipped through Juaymah.

Sheikh Yamani said that Juaymah port is by any standards one of the largest gas shipping ports in the entire world. The minister pointed to the fact that largest LPG carrier on earth was currently moored outside the port.

The petroleum minister explained that the gas-gathering project, which will cost more than $15 billion by the time it is completed depends on the 29 gas-oil separating plants (GOSPs) in the Abqaiq and Ghawwar onshore oil fields.

The minister said that when the network is completed it will produce some two billion cubic meters a day of "dry" gas (used as a domestic fuel), 375,000 cubic feet of methane, 300,000 barrels of LPG, and 3,700 tons of sulfur.

Preliminary studies, Yamani explained, had shown that the return on investment of the costly project would be in the order of 11 per cent a year. More recent studies, the minister said, put that figure at 22 per cent. But the true value of the project, added Sheikh Yamani, will not be in the funds it generates, but in the fact that it is essential for building an industrial base in Saudi Arabia.

Domestic industries, such as the massive petrochemical plants, will be provided the gas at vastly subsidized prices, Sheikh Yamani said. Were it not for these subsidies, return on the gas project would approach 44 per cent a year, according to the Petroleum minister. Petromin, for example, intends to sell the gas to local industries at roughly one quarter of the world market price.

After cutting the inaugural ribbons, King Khaled visited the computerized control room of the Juaymah plant, and afterwards attended a lunch in his honor given by Sheikh Yamani.

The information minister Dr. Muhammad Abdo Yamani, said that the King expressed

Syria-Jordan ties worsen

AMMAN, Nov. 28 (AP) — King Hussein Thursday said that Syria was massing troops on the Jordanian border and that Jordan would defend itself to the "utmost" if attacked.

"If attacked from any quarter, we will fight with all our strength to defend our land which is dearer to us than life," said the 46-year-old monarch. Hussein noted the Syrians crossed into Jordanian territory during the crackdown on the Palestinians in 1970 and were driven back.

"I hope we don't have to prove it again," said Hussein, adding he was not certain how great was the danger of war. The king maintained Jordan was not responding with a military buildup on the border, but sources have said the 60,000-man army was on alert and all leaves have been cancelled.

Travelers returning from the border area indicated some reinforcements had been moved up on the Jordanian side in response to the Syrian troops movements, with new encampments and tents in view.

He evaded a question about whether Iraq, which has a long simmering feud with the rival Baathist Socialist Party in Damascus, would come to the aid of Jordan if fighting broke out between the two countries.

At one point, Hussein seemed to give Syria the benefit of the doubt by saying "we hope that troop massing is for training." Syria disagreed with Hussein on his support for Baghdad in the Iran-Iraq war.

Hussein, however, contended Jordan has "nothing to gain if we weakened Syria, now that Egypt is out of the Arab camp" and the two states were facing Israel alone.

his satisfaction with the gas-gathering project. The King congratulated Sheikh Yamani for his and his ministry's efforts and said that "I thank God for having enabled us to achieve such an enterprise for the welfare of our people."

King Khaled also opened the SR732 million Damman to Abu Hareyah expressway Thursday. The 161-kilometer, six-lane road is the longest expressway to be built to date, according to the communications minister.

Minister Sheikh Hussein Mansouri said that the instructions of King Khaled and Crown Prince Fahd also call for another highway to be built to link both the Central and Eastern provinces to Mecca and Medina. The road will originate from the Eastern Province, and connect to a network of dual-carriage expressways currently under construction.

Sheikh Hussein said that a total of 24,000 kilometers of asphalted road has been constructed in Saudi Arabia and the figure is expected to reach 30,000 upon completion of the new projects.

The inaugural ceremony was attended by Prince Muhammad bin Saud Al-Kabir; Prince Faisal bin Saud; Second Deputy Premier and Commander of the National Guard, Prince Abdullah; Minister of Defense and Aviation, Prince Sultan; Governor of the Eastern Province, Prince Abdul Mohsen bin Jilwi; and other princes, cabinet ministers, senior officials and high-ranking military personnel.

Information minister Dr. Muhammad Abdo Yamani said the King is proud of the skill with which the project has been carried out. The King thanked the minister of communications and his staff for the efforts they exerted in achieving the project.

Mecca summit starts Jan. 24

PARIS, Nov. 28 (AP) — The next summit meeting of Islamic states will take place in Mecca, starting Jan. 24, and continue its work in Taif, Habib Charty, secretary-general of the Organization of Islamic Conference, announced here Thursday.

Foreign ministers will open a preparatory meeting Jan. 17. He said he was confident that all the 42 member states, except Egypt, which has been suspended, would attend the meeting, including Libya, despite the fact Saudi Arabia has broken off relations with Tripoli.

However, he said the organization did not recognize the Soviet-backed government of Afghanistan, and that nation's seat remained vacant. He said the Mecca summit would reinforce that position.

He said he was ready to resume his attempt at mediation in the Iraq-Iran war when there was a glimmer of hope for a ceasefire, but that there was no such hope at the moment.

Charty is in Paris for a (UNESCO) United Nations Education and Scientific and Cultural Organization seminar on Jerusalem.

"When a contact was made with the Soviet Union, it demanded recognition of the Kabul Government. Up to now, we have not been having negotiations directly with the Soviet Union because we do not recognize the government."

"We consider it illegitimate because it was set up after the entry of Soviet troops into Afghanistan and because it keeps going, thanks to the presence of foreign troops."

Fahd declares Arabs to carry out duty

DHAHRAN, Nov. 28 (SPA) — Arab and Islamic countries will have no choice but to carry on their Jihad (holy struggle) unless conditions for a just peace in the Middle East are provided, Crown Prince Fahd said Thursday.

Prince Fahd said at the conclusion of the Arab summit in Amman that Arab countries cannot by any means place their future at the mercy of vague promises and fruitless bargaining, by which their aspirations remain unfulfilled. Later the crown prince returned here with Saudi Arabia's delegation to the conference.

In addition, he said that Jihad will be based on a realistic and well-studied plan in which all means will be used in the various fields, and no matter how long it takes legitimate Arab rights will be recovered. The summit is a link in the chain of fruitful and resolute Arab action, he added. Thanks to the wisdom of Arab leaders the stumbling blocks to the convening of the summit were overcome, Fahd told reporters. Such a result is reflected in the resolution of the conference, which dispels the apprehensions of any party that boycotted the meeting. Also the resolutions urged those who did not attend to rejoin the common Arab drive, he said.

If Arabs unite and put together their potential to achieve the objectives produced by Arab summits "in a genuine and objective framework," the Arabs can — God willing — produce a positive influence in favor of their causes, the crown prince said. Such influence will help them safeguard Arab rights and act to restore the occupied Arab territories along with Arab sovereignty over Jerusalem.

The Amman summit reaffirmed the Arabs' commitment to the Palestinian cause and produced a solid foundation for Palestinian efforts, according to the Saudi Arabian leader. "The Palestine Liberation Organization can now proceed with confidence and exercise its responsibilities in a climate of independence and in the context of its aims and interests which are undoubtedly part of the interest of the Arab world," the prince added.

Prince Fahd said the Amman summit also has proved that the Arab nation is determined, whatever the obstacles placed in its way and regardless of any side-difference within the Arab family, to perform its duty. It is also ready for more struggle and greater sacrifices. Arab leaders in Amman have shown their interest to meet the challenges and build on the Arab intrinsic power in the economic and military fields.

It is imperative to lay down peaceful conditions for a strong drive toward the utilization of all the elements conducive to Arab economic integration that would secure a decent living for every Arab and for future generations. This very policy will provide the basis for developing and fostering the military power.

The Amman summit, Prince Fahd said, for the first time in the history of joint Arab action has managed to work out an integrated work program. "But political action not backed by intrinsic Arab military power to recover the legitimate Arab rights and lay down the groundwork of real peace would be meaningless. At the same time, if intrinsic Arab military power does not rest on a solid and sound Arab economic basis connected to scientific and accurate planning, it would amount to a non-integrated action," the prince said.

He pointed out that Arab leaders who met in Amman have based their discussions on realism and objectivity in laying down the foundations of a great Arab joint action as shown in the Charter for Joint Arab Economic Action. They also worked out practical and wise steps for carrying out this strategy.

Prince Fahd said that as Arab financial power is among the assets available for exploiting the Arab economic potentialities, a joint agreement has been prepared regulating the avenues for the effective investment of Arab funds on scientific and sound economic bases within the Arab world.

The prince affirmed that Saudi Arabia will contribute with all that it has towards the implementation of that charter and will follow it up until it benefits of the Arab world. The Kingdom will also spare no effort to foster Arab solidarity and build that intrinsic power through which, God willing, Arab rights in Palestine can be restored and the Arab Palestinian people can recover their rights and set up their own independent state on their national soil.

Prince Fahd, called on Somali President Muhammad Siad Barre Wednesday evening at his residence in the Jordanian capital. Earlier, he received Tunisian Premier, Muhammad Mazali.

The summit has called for an immediate ceasefire in the two-month-old war between Iraq and Iran. A resolution passed at the end of a three-day conference said it welcomed Iraq's positive response to peace efforts by the Organization of the Islamic Conference, the United Nations and nonaligned states and called on Iran to respond in the same way.

It said they supported "Iraq's legitimate rights over its land and waters in accordance with international treaties signed by the two parties (Iraq and Iran)".

On the Arab-Israeli conflict, the heads of state agreed that they would break all relations with any country which recognized Jerusalem as the capital of Israel or moved its embassy there.

Despite the PLO boycott, they reaffirmed their continued support for the organization and for the Palestinians' struggle to establish an independent state.

They pledged to continue efforts to destroy the U.S.-sponsored Camp David peace agreements between Egypt and Israel. The resolution was announced as part of a final declaration issued after the formal closing session of the summit.

The summit's final resolution condemned the U.S. government for labeling the PLO as a "terrorist" organization and rejected as "inadequate" U.N. Security Council Resolution 242, which has served as the basis for a Middle East settlement. The 1967 U.N. resolution has been opposed by the PLO because it refers to the Palestinians only as a "refugee" problem while they seek independence. On the economic side, the summit adopted proposals drafted by a 20-state foreign ministers meeting last week for economic development of the region and creation of a European style cooperation.

Before the closing speeches the heads of delegations signed a charter for joint national action — a new Arab strategy for confronting Israel — and plans for an Arab economic development program.

$5 billion for development

AMMAN, Nov. 28 (R) — Arab heads of state meeting agreed to set up a five billion dollars development fund for economic and social projects in the Arab world, Jordanian officials said. They said the Arab League summit formally adopted an Iraqi proposal for an "Arab development decade" to be financed by $500 million from the fund every year for the next 10 years.

The cash aid will take the form of loans at an interest rate of one per cent, with a grace period of 10 years and repayment over 20 years. The contributing countries were named as Iraq, Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, the United Arab Emirates and Qatar.

Saudi Arabia listed 2nd on U.S. foreign policy

WASHINGTON Bureau
WASHINGTON, Nov. 28 — America's relationship with Saudi Arabia is the second highest foreign policy priority of the incoming Reagan administration — after U.S. dealings with the Soviet Union — according to informed sources here.

Solving the Palestinian problem is ranked fifth among Reagan's foreign policy priorities, these sources said, noting that the Palestinian issue was surprisingly high on the new administration's list considering Reagan's pro-Israeli campaign rhetoric.

The top five foreign policy issues for the Reagan presidency, in order of perceived importance, are:

1 — U.S. relations with the Soviet Union,

2 — U.S. relations with Saudi Arabia,

3 — Strategic arms limitation treaty (SALT) negotiations, 4 — The Iran-Iraq conflict, and 5 — The Palestinian question.

Strategies for dealing with these five policy areas are now being crafted by the Reagan transition team, which is studying reports compiled by the Carter administration and supplementing these with input from a number of outside advisers.

Meanwhile, diplomatic sources said Saudi Arabia's minister of industry and electricity, Dr. Ghazi Algosabi, who is here on a private visit, has had contacts this past week with members of the Reagan camp. Further details of these contacts were not immediately available.

Iraq, Iran forces locked in combat near two cities

BEIRUT, Nov. 28 (AP) — Iran and Iraq said their troops, tanks and helicopter gunships locked in "fierce combat" on the outskirts of two major cities in Iran's southwestern province of Khuzestan Friday.

War communiques reported the escalating action around the oil refining city of Abadan and the highway town of Susangerd as Iraqi forces nearly completed the construction of a flood wall in the invaded province.

The government-controlled English language Baghdad observer said the 45-kilometer long flood-wall was set up to shield Iraqi forces against rainfloods and river floods as well as possible attempts by the enemy to "drown" the invaders by letting loose irrigation dams.

The newspapers quoted Iraqi engineering corps officers as saying other embankments were under construction to protect the roads and communication routes of the Iraqi forces in Khuzestan from being inundated by floods from the Karun and Karleh rivers.

The revelation underscored Iraq's preparation for a long stay in war conquered area as the conflict on the northern fringe of the Gulf flared into its 68th day with no hope for an early ceasefire.

Both sides reported heavy fighting with tanks and helicopter gunships on the north-eastern and eastern approaches of the besieged city of 350,000 people, with Iran again claiming it punched holes in the Five-week-old Iraqi siege.

Scholars meet Spanish king

MADRID, Nov. 28 (SPA) — King Juan Carlos of Spain received the Saudi Arabian minister of higher education in his Royal Orient Palace here.

The Spanish King met with Sheikh Hassan ibn Abdullah Al-Sheikh, who is also the chancellor of Saudi Arabian universities, and the accompanying delegation. Sheikh Hassan is visiting Spain at the invitation of Luis Gonzales, minister for universities and research, who also attended the meeting.

Sheikh Hassan conveyed to King Juan Carlos greetings from King Khaled who wished him health and happiness and the Spanish people further progress and prosperity. And King Juan welcomed the minister and his delegation and said he hoped that their visit would lead to more cooperation between the two friendly countries in the educational field.

The minister and his party Wednesday also visited the university, the Islamic center and an Arab and Islamic studies institute in Granada. He then had lunch with the rector of Granada University.

A day earlier, at the start of their five-day visit to Spain, four Saudi University rectors accompanying Sheikh Hassan conferred at the premises of the Foreign Ministry with officials from the ministries of culture and foreign affairs, as well as Spanish universities. They paved the way for a cultural cooperation agreement. They also visited Madrid University and discussed academic cooperation between Saudi Arabia and Spain with its rector.

The delegation comprises Dr. Bakr Abdullah, rector of the University of Petroleum and Minerals in Dhahran; Dr. Mansour Al-Turki, rector of Riyadh University; Dr. Muhammad Said Qahatani, rector of King Faisal University in the Eastern Province; and Dr. Abdullah Nassif, rector of King Abdul Aziz University in Jeddah.

Sattam dedicates trade fair

RIYADH, Nov. 28 (CNA) — The first of a series of large-scale Chinese trade fairs to be held in the Kingdom was opened Wednesday in Riyadh by Riyadh's Deputy Governor Prince Sattam for a 10-day exhibition.

Among the more than 200 guests attending the opening ceremony were Muhammad Al Sugair, vice chairman and managing director of the Saudi Development Fund, and Yusef Hammad, deputy minister of industry and electricity. The ceremony started with a recital of verses from the Koran, and then Prince Sattam cut the ribbon to open the display being held in the spacious conference room of the Riyadh Palace Hotel.

Earlier, Chinese Ambassador Hsueh Yu-chi said at a press conference that the fair aims to promote trade between the two friendly countries. He said the Republic of China is trying its best to provide the Saudi people with quality goods at a reasonable price. He pointed out that the value of his country's exports to the Kingdom increased by more than 45 times in the last decade from $8 million in 1971 to $475 million in 1979. He said he expects the figure to reach $700 million this year.

The fair, the largest of its kind in recent years, is organized by CETDC, a non-profit trade promoting organization and is attended by some 50 leading Chinese manufacturers and exporters. On display were electronics and electrical appliances, building materials, hardware, furniture, ready-made garments, transportation equipment, handicrafts and foodstuffs.

The Chinese Trade Fair will be followed by three similar exhibitions respectively to be held in Jeddah from December 9-18, Al Khobar December 21-27, and Taif from December 30 through January 5.

Gulf youths given tour of Darayya

RIYADH, Nov. 28 (SPA) — Gulf children participating in the First Gulf Children's Festival, held in the Kingdom and organized by the Ministry of Information, visited the town of Darayya and saw the historic features of the old town.

The children left Riyadh later for Dhahran as part of their tour of the Kingdom. The group had visited the national museum in Riyadh Thursday. Later on the evening, the group of Gulf children were the guests of honor at a theater play organized by the Youth Welfare Department of Riyadh Education Directorate. The ceremony was attended by Ibrahim Al-Haji, education ministry undersecretary for cultural affairs; Dr. Hamad Al-Saloum, Riyadh education director; and representatives of the Ministry of Information, the Youth Welfare General Presidency and members of the public.

The program comprised national and welcome songs, constructive plays and comedies. Sulaiman Al-Musallam, director of the youth welfare department of Riyadh education directorate, spoke at the opening of the program emphasizing the importance of such a meeting between children of the Gulf. The program was concluded with a Najdi folk dance performed by a group of students.

The children's visit program has been very busy since their arrival last week. On Wednesday, they paid a visit to Prince Sattam, deputy Riyadh governor, and Prince Faisal ibn Fahd, president of youth welfare.

Prince Sattam welcomed the group in their second country, the Kingdom, and said that today's children will be tomorrow's young men who will up-hold the banner of Islam. Prince Sattam told the group that it was the duty of the youth to get acquainted with vast Arab world, because they are the veins of life of the community and it is them who will realize its aspirations.

He halted the program's idea describing it as a 'great step toward acquaintance, friendship and love between brothers, especially in the early age. Prince Sattam forwarded special thanks to the children of Iraq, who arrived later than the others. A spokesman for the children, a youth from Oman, thanked on behalf of his colleagues the prince for the warm welcome.

Prince Faisal ibn Fahd also welcomed the children and said that the Kingdom is pleased to host such a gathering that reflects the close and strong ties between the people of the area. He told the children that the Kingdom is undertaking studies to set up special clubs for children, and actual work will begin shortly.

Chinese sign hospital management pacts

JEDDAH, Nov. 28 (SPA) — A third agreement between the Saudi and Chinese health ministries was signed here Thursday by Health Minister Dr. Hussein Jazaeri and C.M. Wang, health director in China.

Under the agreement, the Chinese Health Ministry will run Jeddah Hospital and Hofuf Hospital. It will also prepare a study on the work requirements at the proposed open-heart surgery ward at Jeddah Public Hospital. It will also provide the equipment for the bone and kidney surgery ward at the same hospital.

Chef caters King's feast

By Gregory Llewellyn
Al-Khobar Bureau

ALKHOBAR, Nov. 28 — Little did Rifat Cherbini know what was in store for him when he arrived five weeks ago at Al-Khobar. Engaged as executive cook by the Al-Nasr Metropolitan Hotel, the Egyptian chef had worked for the previous 10 years in London. But nothing in his former experience could quite prepare him for his first major assignment: catering a banquet for 900 in honor of King Khalid.

What does such a meal require? One starts with 100 sheep. Boiling and roasting that meat at one time might tax the capacity of most kitchens, but chef Rifat found that he could cope by using pans with a diameter of four meters — each big enough to accommodate 16 sheep or if the need arose, two camels.

Accompany that with 300 kilos of steamed rice, 150 kilos of hamour (fish), 200 kilos of fresh prawns, complimentary quantities of salad, sambousic, and fruit, and you have a meal fit for a King and his 900 guests.

Asked if he would care to repeat this performance, Cherbini told Arab News he'd do it every day since it gives him the opportunity to meet interesting people.

But doing it that often would pose a bit of a strain on the chef who confessed that he had not slept for 48 hours and that he was hoarse with shouting at the kitchen staff.

Dr. Wang also visited New Jeddah Clinic Thursday. He said he was impressed by the high standard of service and the modern equipment. He was accompanied by Abdul Aziz Safir, an expert on hospitals in Saudi Arabia.

Later in the day, Wang and his delegation left for home at the conclusion of their visit to Saudi Arabia. He was seen off at the airport by Dr. Muhammad Azza, director of health

Majed opens brick factory

JEDDAH, Nov. 28 (SPA) — Mecca Governor Prince Majed, dedicated Arafat Red Brick Factory off Kilo 45, Medina Road. He toured the various parts of the plant and was briefed on the manufacturing process.

On Wednesday evening, the board of administration of the plant gave a dinner in honor of the prince.

On Thursday, Prince Majed inspected Jeddah Chamber of Commerce and Industry. He was met by the head of the chamber, Sheikh Ismail Abu Daoud and other businessmen. He urged them to work harder to serve the citizens. A lunch was then given in his honor.

In other news, a total of 8,500 land plots from among the royal gifts have been distributed, Riyadh Municipality announced Friday.

The land was distributed in four areas within the Eastern Triangle, north of Al-Roda district (1,200 plots), Laban area (15,000 plots), A-Dele Al-Shamali area (1,600 plots), and the northeastern area of Riyadh (3,500 plots).

In a separate development, Riyadh Municipality confiscated a quantity of chocolate boxes last Wednesday because their expiration date was April, 1980. It also destroyed 900 heads of refrigerated meat at a cold storage facility in Riyadh after they were found to be unfit for consumption.

Mayor Sheikh Abdullah Al-Na'im said that the merchants, in two shops in Riyadh, had placed a special tag on the chocolate boxes to conceal the expiry date and substitute it with the inscription "Exp. September, 1980." The shopowners admitted that they bought the merchandise from one of the two major importers in a Saudi city. They produced the bills. Thereupon, the mayor of the city in question was immediately contacted to check whether the warehouse of the supplier was operating properly, because this type of chocolate is very sensitive and could create

COMMENT

By Abdullah Omar Khayyat
Al-Jazirah

During the pilgrimage season traffic police of Mecca took special steps to organize the flow of the thousands of vehicles, which entered and left the city every hour. Whole streets were blocked so that the movement would not be stalled by oncoming vehicles or those going in another direction. This was understandable and the traffic police did a good job, but the situation that prevailed then is still there although nearly all the pilgrims have gone home.

The other day I went to the holy city to which I belong, and where I had spent most of my life which means that I know it quite well, but I found it extremely hard to reach the holy Haram. The road blocks and closed streets that had helped to organize the traffic of the pilgrimage were still there. Whereas it was a question of minutes in normal circumstances to reach the Haram, it took me a few frustrating hours this time to be there.

So what is our traffic authorities doing about it? I think we should carry out the proposal made by the Governor of Mecca Prince Majed, which calls for the participation of other wisemen on organizing the traffic plan of the holy city. They would include members of the municipal council and the municipal staff as well as others.

The point is that the Mecca traffic police seem to have only one solution to congestion. They close down streets and divert traffic elsewhere to solve the problem. Drivers are left alone to find their way out, and the police sit back and relax.

health troubles for children if the expiration date has expired.

The mayor said he regretted that one of the suppliers was indulging in fraud out of greed and illicit profit paying the least attention to the health damage this action could cause to citizens and expatriates alike. He affirmed that the municipality will conduct a large-scale search campaign for unhealthy foodstuffs and will react in a very severe manner, especially that King Khalid and Crown Prince Fahd are keen on encouraging suppliers of foodstuffs and helping them in their trade.

King greets guardsmen and citizens

AI-KHOBAR, Nov. 28 (SPA) — King Khalid received officers and men of the national guard in the Eastern Province Wednesday.

The men were introduced to the King by Sheikh Abdul Mohsen Al-Mangoor, the guard's secretary in the province. Later, the King received the tribal chiefs and residents of the Eastern Province, who flocked to the royal palace since early morning to meet and greet the King. The meeting was attended by Second Deputy Premier and Commander of the National Guard Prince Abdullah.

Meanwhile, Somali President Muhammad Siad Barre stopped in Jeddah Thursday on his way back to Mogadishu after attending the Amman summit. He was met and seen off at the airport by Sheikh Salem Sunbul, head of the Foreign Ministry's Protocol, and by the Somali ambassador to Saudi Arabia, Sheikh Salem later met Saleh ibn Ali, the prime minister of the Comoro Islands Republic, who arrived on a short visit to the Kingdom.

Social services visited

DAMMAM, Nov. 28 (SPA) — A delegation of Brazilian ladies representing charitable welfare societies in Brazil visited some of the Eastern Province's charitable and social service societies. The delegation visited the installations of Social Services Society Thursday. The tour comprised the health complex and kindergarten of the society.

The Brazilian delegation also paid a similar visit to Qatif Charitable Social Services Society. The visitors expressed their admiration for the Saudi Arabian women's activities in welfare and social services. The Brazilian ladies arrived here Tuesday as part of their visit to the Kingdom at the invitation of the Ministry of Labor and Social Services.

* for instance in water supply systems. Water — the element nature and human beings cannot do without — is required in ever growing quantities, for drinking or cooling purposes, to cook a meal or to irrigate agricultural land. Water is used to generate electricity and to produce steel and paper, textiles and chemicals, in fact there is hardly any industrial process which does not depend on water.

Siemens technology is finding its application in water supply systems, from reservoirs to pump storage facilities, from sewage to water purification plants. Generators, drives and pumps, measuring and remote control systems, analytical laboratory equipment, recording instruments and supervisory equipment from Siemens ensure that water supply services can cope with the growing demand for water.

Water recycling, tapping fresh water from rivers, lakes or reservoirs, or biological purification of sewage water from industries or private households — Siemens engineers are familiar with the diverse technological problems which water supply authorities the world over are faced with. Siemens engineering knowhow and practical experience backed by a complete range of high-quality products make sure that water taps will not run dry.

This is just one example of the many fields of our activities. For further information please contact:

Early resignation predicted

Begin's survival hangs in the balance

TEL AVIV, Nov. 28 (AP) — With one year left of its term in office, life for Prime Minister Menachem Begin's government seems to be getting harder all the time. Speculation is again rife that Begin may resign early.

The latest blow has been the expulsion of Ezer Weizman, Begin's former defense minister, from the premier's Herut Party and from the ruling coalition, reducing Begin's strength in the Knesset (parliament) to a 50-50 split with the opposition and the independents.

Weizman has announced plans to challenge Begin with his own party in the next election, which must be held no later than next November. Begin's survival until then depends on mustering the backing of those independents who are not committed to toppling the Begin government.

"The current situation is ungovernable," says coalition member Menachem Savidor. He predicts that Begin may resign early next year if he cannot entice some defectors to return.

Begin's major foreign policy problem is the stalemate talks with Egypt and the United States on Palestinian self-rule in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, envisioned as the first step in resolving the Palestinian issue.

The Iran-Iraq war and Ronald Reagan's election victory have eased the pressure for quick results, and by tacit agreement on all sides, the self-rule talks have been put in the freezer.

"If we fail, it will be over internal issues," says coalition leader Haim Corfu.

Begin has shown surprising durability in the face of previous political crises. His coalition once numbered 78 of the 120 Knesset members but economic issues have been the main cause of eroding his support.

His closest call came earlier this month when he squeaked through a parliamentary no-confidence motion over Israel's 130 per cent annual inflation rate. The vote was 57-54.

Weizman's vote against the government led to his expulsion from the party 3½ years after he engineered its upset election victory over the long-ruling Labor Party.

The coalition's weakness has tied Begin's hands on major legislation. A government bill to impose a one-time surtax on the upper classes is dying in committee. An eight-month-old proposal to settle Jews in live-in seminaries in the occupied city of Hebron has virtually been killed by another committee.

The government's precarious position also makes it vulnerable to demands by splinter groups for political payoffs each time Begin is threatened by a no-confidence motion in parliament.

"If Begin quits, it will be because he cannot afford the blackmail of the small factions," said one Knesset member. Begin is still stronger than the number suggest, however.

The largest opposition party, Labor, is torn in a bitter leadership battle between party leader Shimon Peres and former prime minister Yitzhak Rabin.

Peres appeared the winner in elections for the party convention, which will decide in December which of the two men will stand for prime minister, but Rabin has vowed to go on fighting.

BRIEFS

UNITED NATIONS, (R) — The Security Council has extended until May 31, 1981 the mandate of the U.N. Disengagement Observer Force (UNDOF) serving as a buffer between the Syrian and Israeli armies on the Golan Heights. The vote in the 15-nation council was 14 to none, with no abstentions. China, which is opposed in principle to U.N. peace-keeping operations, declined to take part in the vote.

SIDON, Lebanon, (R) — An Israeli patrol crossed into southern Lebanon at dawn Thursday and blew up three houses in a village in an area controlled by Irish U.N. troops, official sources said. The sources said the patrol blew up the houses after evacuating their residents.

CAIRO, (R) — Egypt's official news agency said Thursday night the opposition Socialist Labor Party (SLP) had been thrown into disarray by the resignation of 13 of its members. But the SLP disputed the report. The Middle East News Agency (MENA) said the 13 had resigned over changes in the party leadership and announced they would sit as independents. SLP Secretary-General Rifaat Shahawi told reporters that seven of the 13 named in the MENA report had quit the party months ago and the other six had not resigned.

ANKARA, (R) — Police searched Thursday for snipers who killed two policemen and seriously wounded two others in the Black Sea province of Samsun, officials said. The shooting occurred in the center of Vezirkopru township Wednesday as a car carrying the policemen arrived to investigate a robbery report, newspapers said.

Mengistu to visit Kenya next week

ADDIS ABABA, Nov. 28 (R) — Ethiopian leader Mengistu Haile Mariam will make a four-day official visit to Kenya next week, the foreign ministry has announced. The trip comes shortly after a five-day visit to Ethiopia by Sudanese leader Jaafar Numeiri and is seen by official sources here as cementing ties between the three East African states.

Col. Mengistu's visit, which starts on Monday follows an official visit to Ethiopia by Kenyan President Daniel Arap Moi last year.

Waldheim optimistic over Cyprus

UNITED NATIONS, Nov. 28 (R) — Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim has presented a generally optimistic report on the inter-communal talks on Cyprus, saying their resumption was an opportunity to reach a settlement that should not be lost.

He said some common ground had been indicated since representatives of the Greek-Cypriot and Turkish-Cypriot sides began meeting on August 9 after a break of more than a year.

Reporting to the General Assembly on the

Pakistan judge charged with forgery

RAWALPINDI, Nov. 28 (R) — The Pakistani government has said that former supreme court judge Ghulam Safdar Shah, one of the judges who opposed the death sentence passed on former Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, was guilty of cheating and forgery.

Kenya and Marxist Ethiopia are linked by a defense pact inspired by Somali (claims to parts of their countries. Ethiopia said it repulsed an invasion earlier this year by Somali forces of the ethnically Somali Ogaden region of east Ethiopia.

Kenya mobilized its army two weeks ago and clamped a curfew on northeast Kenya after attacks by Somali raiders. This ethnically Somali area was the scene of a Somali-backed secessionist guerrilla war in the 1960s.

talks Thursday, Waldheim said it seemed evident that all concerned accepted this process, carried out under his auspices, as the best available way of working toward a just and lasting settlement.

The two communities have been in conflict for years and after a bloody civil war the U.N. sent in 1964 a peace-keeping force that is still on duty in the Mediterranean island.

"The talks have proceeded in a friendly and businesslike atmosphere," Waldheim said.

It said evidence submitted to the supreme judicial council in its inquiry into charges of misconduct against the judge also showed him guilty of "dishonesty receiving" and "habitually dealing in" stolen property and using a forged document as genuine. Judge Safdar Shah left Pakistan last week for neighboring Afghanistan.

Qaddafi denies involvement

OAU delegates meet in Togo on new ceasefire bid in Chad

LOME, Togo, Nov. 28 (Agencies) — Representatives of the Organization of African Unity who are trying to establish a ceasefire in the latest phase of Chad's 17-year-old civil war convened here Thursday night. But it was still not known if former Chadian Defense Minister Hissene Habre, leader of the army battling interim President Goukouni Oueddei, would turn up by the OAU deadline.

As late as Wednesday evening, representatives of Habre's Armed Forces of the North (FAN) in the embattled Chadian capital of N'Djamena were saying they had received no OAU invitation to come to Lome.

Habre was believed to be still in N'Djamena at the time. Goukouni, head of the Popular Armed Forces (FAP) and head of the Transition government — itself a creation of an OAU commission — has come here for the third time since August to discuss a ceasefire. Habre showed up for the October meeting but did not come in August.

Representatives of the OAU subcommittee on Chad took advantage of a meeting of the Niger River authority in Conakry, Guinea, last week to announce the Nov. 28 deadline. The subcommittee composed of Guinea, Togo, Benin and the Congo, had met here in October with Goukouni and Habre.

OAU sources said at the time that Goukouni and Habre could not agree on the provisions of a text, which was hastily prepared after it became certain both would show up.

Subcommittee members adjourned to iron out the agreement they have worked for the past five weeks.

The text calls for an immediate ceasefire in N'Djamena, an observer mission to the capital, a neutral peacekeeping force, demilitarization of N'Djamena and the surrounding area, and "appropriate" sanctions for offenders. It is not clear what the sanctions would be or who would impose them.

In Tripoli meanwhile, Libyan leader Muammar Qaddafi has denied that his country was militarily involved in the Chad war. Qaddafi Thursday told a small group of reporters invited to his residence that Libyan aid to the government of President Oueddei was limited to a few military advisers and guards around the presidential palace in N'Djamena.

Promotes Denmark-Kingdom ties

Envoy rescues antiques from sunken ships

By Raana Siddiqi

JEDDAH: Frantz B. Howitz, Denmark's envoy to the Kingdom is truly the "Ambassador Extraordinaire". So full has been his life that he is noted not only for his diplomatic career but also for the rich experience gained from his numerous hobbies, many of which COLLECTION: Thai antiques recovered from the sea are shared by his lovely Thai wife.

In an interview with Arab News, Ambassador Howitz talked candidly about his diplomatic assignments and his plans and hopes for further improvement in relations between his country and Saudi Arabia, especially in the economic and cultural fields. The ambassador, who has been in the Kingdom since July, also spoke of his hobbies, such as marine archaeology and photography, his love of animals and his devotion to wild-life and conservation.

A member of the Danish underground movement during the German occupation, young Howitz found himself jobless after the war ended. Deciding that he must pursue higher education, he joined the University of Copenhagen to study law, which he completed in an exceptionally short time, and then in 1950, entered the Foreign Service. As he explains, "Joining the Foreign Service was my own decision, not a coincidence. It was the only job I had applied for."

After the usual training he was posted to Brazil, where he spent four years. His other assignments include Prague, Hamburg, New York, Bangkok and a few postings home in between. He expected Jeddah to be a very busy post involving much travelling, as he is concurrently accredited to eight Gulf countries while based here.

The Danish foreign service is comparatively small, and offers of posts can be declined: a long period is allowed for officers to make a decision. But, said the ambassador, "It was not a difficult decision for my wife and me to accept this assignment in Saudi Arabia. We were told of it a year ago, gave it careful thought and accepted the new challenge. We are very pleased to be in this part of the world, which is fast growing in importance on the international scene."

Howitz feels that the Arab world deserves more positive publicity in the West than it has received up to now. In his capacity as a Western ambassador, he intends to fulfil this need by extending cultural relations between Saudi Arabia and Denmark. He asserts, "I am aiming to deepen the ties between our two countries. We can do something very interesting by exchanging exhibitions of art, by making films, publishing books and promoting other and such projects."

According to the Danish envoy, the suggestion of a book about Saudi Arabia and Denmark has been favorably received by the Saudi Information Minister. He has already made proposals on the matter at Copenhagen and hopes for a positive reaction. Howitz is familiar with the mechanics involved in such a project, for while he was in Thailand a similar book depicting Thai-Danish relations was published as a result of his interest and efforts.

He also hopes to arrange several exhibitions by Danish designers. He is especially keen on Danish silver. "We have a long tradition of making silver in Denmark. The Saudis deserve to see these things, and I am sure an exhibition would appeal to a lot of people here." What Howitz is hoping for is a grand project bringing Danish silversmiths to the Kingdom so that they can demonstrate the process of making their silverware as in the workshop, as well as displaying the beauty of their world-renowned products.

Talking about the Kingdom and the Saudi

Ambassador Howitz

Arabians, the Danish ambassador remarked, "I have been received very well in all fields. Our way of life and of running our administration is different from the Saudis. It is a different system here; we should respect it. In fact, I find it fairly easy to comply with local customs and habits."

Mme. Howitz at this point expressed a similar opinion, saying that expatriates should not try to impose their will on their hosts or try to change their ways but should respect them and accept them, for "we are guests here."

On the economic side, the ambassador feels that Denmark's share in the Saudi imports is very small and he would like to see this grow. "On the one hand we can offer quality, know-how and expertise to the benefit of Saudi Arabia and we can compensate, on the other hand, for the large amount of oil that we buy from them." This improvement of the economic balance is another task he hopes to achieve. As he states, "That is my hope. I do not know whether I will succeed or not. Today's diplomacy is governed by both politics and economy. I'd like to put that into perspective, otherwise it gets too dull and harsh. We need a little softness in our relations."

Howitz revealed that there are very few Muslims in Denmark. However, an Islamic Cultural Center with a mosque is under construction in Copenhagen and the opening is expected in the near future.

The Howitzes had a six year tour in Thailand where they took up numerous cultural projects individually and as a team. Talking at length about his sojourn in Bangkok, the ambassador described it as "very rewarding." There they took up a major project in marine archaeology; other philanthropic and development projects were carried out by Mme. Howitz.

Describing the marine archaeology project, the ambassador chuckled. "It was team work. She (Mme. Howitz) was the brain and I was the muscle." Mme. Howitz, who introduced underwater archaeology to South-East Asia, has spent with her husband many days and weeks at a stretch hunting for lost treasures in the Gulf of Siam. They worked dug up 16 ships; a highly skilled diver, Ambassador Howitz was the one to pick up the relics from sunken ships, clean them and make them ready to be photographed.

Asked if he had studied the art of antique preservation, the ambassador said, "I taught myself the preservation of antiques and pottery." During their several lengthy expeditions every year they spent many months at a time collecting rare pieces for the Museum of Bangkok, and they loved this painstaking and tiring job.

Mrs. Howitz has already published many articles and books on their archaeological expeditions and finds and is in the process of completing some other publications, all in English. Despite her multifarious duties as the wife of an ambassador, she found time to start a number of other projects in Thailand including a pottery village and a cooperative farm. She also took care of 500 children under a development project. This project, she explains, provided food and pre-school education for the youngsters. Ambassador and Mrs. Howitz both miss Thailand because "It was not easy to say goodbye to that part of our lives. We did so much, and it was extremely satisfying."

Along with many wonderful memories and a rich collection of Thai antiques, the Danish Ambassador and his wife have also brought an unusual pet — a Bengal leopard. This harmless looking cat is the second of its kind they have had, the first having died in Thailand. Ambassador Howitz says, "I prefer wild animals to the so-called household ones. This leopard is a source of great joy and comfort to us. It is completely tamed, but it needs constant attention and loving care."

It is not astonishing for someone who loves animals and has spent time studying animal psychology to feel strongly against killing animals for pleasure or adornment. Mr. Howitz has in fact been very active in the drive to preserve spotted cats. "Showing off riches at the cost of world ecology is not right. We have to control it" is his opinion of big game hunting. He adds with a smile, "I must confess I was once a hunter myself, but realised later one ought not to kill for pleasure and so became a convert to animal preservation instead."

It is amazing how this outstanding couple par excellence have kept their days filled with activity that can hardly be described as ordinary. They are living proof that today's busy and cliché ridden world need not keep us from pursuing our varied interests. The Jeddah diplomatic corps is richer for having the Howitzes around.

AMMAN BREAKTHROUGH

The Arab summit in Amman has put an end to all argument about attendance and procedure. There are those who say that the absence of those who chose it might mean an easier run summit. Past experience does indeed bear this out. Views were too divergent, and the result was resolutions which merely papered over the cracks, remaining in the majority a dead letter.

This, some observers are pointing out, has been a cause of demoralization among the citizens in the Arab world. It might therefore not be wholly negative that a number — in this case, representing the majority — of Arab leaders should sit down to hammer out a truly agreed upon policy. A partial success such as this is to be preferred to no success at all.

In addition to matters of strategy, both political and military, in relation to the struggle against Israel, the Amman summit has made a breakthrough on economic and developmental issues, which are of immediate concern to the man in the street.

Matters of economic and developmental integration, it might be argued, have not been sufficiently in the mind of Arab planners before. All efforts were directed to the political and military challenges, facing the Arab world. In this sense, the summit gives a new hope by agreeing to invest $5 billion in the next decade in poorer Arab countries.

Renewed unrest on the Israeli-occupied West Bank last week highlights the difficulties faced by the Palestinians there in pursuing their right to self-determination. An overwhelming majority at the United Nations has voted in favor of that right. The European Community's most recent statement on the Middle East endorsed it. In presenting last week the report of a delegation to the Middle East led by himself, the leader of the British Liberal Party, David Steel, went further in speaking of the absolute right of the Palestinians to opt for an independent state on the West Bank if that was their desire (which everyone knows it is). Yet the inhabitants of the West Bank remain subject to an Israeli military government which makes no secret of its determination to allow no manifestation of Palestinian nationalism. The ten student demonstrators shot by Israeli troops in Bethlehem and Ramallah bear witness to that.

The students were protesting against the military government's action in closing Bir Zeit University, where annual festival of Palestinian culture and folklore was in progress. Such a festival obviously has political implications, since it must reinforce the resentment of young Palestinians at their inability to express their sense of a national identity, political as well as cultural.

Of course it can be argued (although it is not an argument which British students would accept) that political activity is not a proper field for students, who should leave such matters to their elders. But here again the Palestinians on the West Bank encounter insuperable difficulties in the shape of the very severe restrictions on political activity enforced by the Israeli military government even on the responsible and elected representatives of the West Bank community.

The Israeli authorities have recently imposed "restriction orders" on 33 leading Palestinians in the occupied West Bank. This means that they are unable to leave their towns or villages, that they must report to the police every day and that Israeli police or soldiers are liable to invade their homes at any hour of the day or night to make sure that they are present. These Palestinians, who include mayors, lawyers, journalists and businessmen, have broken no law and are accused of no crime. Their offense, if it be one, is that they are among the surviving leaders of their community and that, as such, they may encourage its members to maintain their peaceful resistance to the military occupation of their country.

For two of the 33 the restriction orders are being applied with exceptional severity. They are the mayors of Hebron and Halhul, Fahd Qawasmeh and Muhammad Milhem, who were deported from the West Bank without warning or legal process in May and have been trying ever since to win the right to return to their homes and families and to resume the functions for which they were legally elected four years ago.

On Nov. 18 the U.N.'s special political committee adopted by 117 votes to 1 its third resolution calling on Israel to allow the return of the mayors.

Qawasmeh and Milhem are in fact back in the West Bank and have been for the past month — but in prison, although they too have been neither accused nor convicted of any illegal act. Despite this, they find themselves at the center of an extraordinary and protracted legal battle which the Israeli Supreme Court seems unable to resolve.

There is no argument about the fact that the original deportation of the two mayors was illegally executed. Under Israeli law, they should have been accorded the right to appeal against such a measure before it was carried out. Instead they were bundled into an army helicopter with black bags over their heads and dumped across the Lebanese border, without being given the chance even to say goodbye to their wives. In hearing their subsequent appeal, three judges of the Israeli Supreme Court agreed that the manner of their deportation was illegal, but decided by a two to one majority to uphold it.

Lawyers on behalf of the mayors then adopted a different approach, presenting an appeal to the Israeli military governor of the West Bank. The hearing was held at the passenger terminal near the Allenby Bridge, the transit point between East Jordan and the West Bank. The mayors were allowed across the bridge to attend the hearing (from which even the Israeli press was rigorously excluded) but were not allowed to return to their homes pending the decision. That was in the middle of October and they have been held in detention ever since.

When the military governor rejected their appeal (on Oct. 20) and ordered that they be deported again, the two mayors appealed once again to the Israeli Supreme Court. They then went on hunger strike in the converted cafe at the terminal building where they were being held in isolation.

When the court, with obvious reluctance, took up their case again, the mayors abandoned their hunger strike. They were still not allowed to return to their homes and families, but instead were transported to Ramallah prison inside Israel, where they have now been held, again without charge, for more than four weeks.

The whole episode and the way it has been handled has aroused widespread criticism both among Israelis and in Western diplomatic circles in Israel. Whatever decision the Supreme Court now reaches — and the long delay indicates that the court is well aware of the dilemma — it will displace one section of Israeli opinion and will arouse either jubilation or passionate resentment among the Palestinians of the West Bank, where feelings are already running high over the sudden closing of Bir Zeit University and the shooting of nine students in protest demonstrations in Ramallah and Bethlehem.

What the Palestinians feel may not cause the Israeli authorities much loss of sleep — but the reactions of the Israelis themselves could be disturbing. Already the Israeli press has noted the extreme contrast between the treatment of the Arab mayors and that given to two Jewish terrorists who were arrested about the same time.

The terrorists were two soldiers (one an officer) in the Israeli army, who stole a large quantity of ammunition, hand-grenades and 250 lbs of TNT and stored it in a religious school near the Wailing Wall. At their trial they stated that they had intended to blow up mosques, Arab public buildings and Christian missionary institutions in Jerusalem. They were sentenced to 19 and 13 months in prison respectively.

The defense lawyer, Ronny Milo (a Knesset member of Begin's Likud party), pleaded that this "minor offense" had been caused by the two men's "pent-up frustrations" over the murder of six Jewish settlers in Hebron — the same incident which had provoked the deportation of the two Palestinian mayors.

The lawyer's plea prompted the reporter of the leading newspaper Haaretz to observe: "What a splendid prescription from Milo the psychologist! You're feeling nervous or frustrated? There's a simple answer. Go and get yourself a large quantity of explosives and prepare a plan. Choose as targets two missionaries, three mosques and perhaps an Arab school. It's a perfect therapy. Medical insurance may not recognize it, but the military courts do. And all this from a respectable member of the Knesset who belongs to the ruling coalition..."

The question illustrates the dilemma facing the Israeli Supreme Court over the case of the two mayors — especially since no one has suggested or produced the slightest shred of evidence that they intended to murder anyone. Their offense, it must be recalled, is the more serious one of being potential leaders of the resistance to military occupation.

Race starts to succeed Reagan

By Anthony Holden

WASHINGTON — Senator John Glenn of Ohio, once famous as the first American to orbit the earth, now as one of the few Democrats to have survived the recent holocaust, has announced that he is a candidate for election to the U.S. presidency in 1984.

Even as he spoke, a furious power-struggle over the Democratic Party chairmanship was developing between forces representing the presidential aspirations of Senator Edward Kennedy and Vice-President Walter Mondale.

Back in the Senate, Daniel Patrick Moynihan of New York is conspicuously jockeying for position. Senator Gary Hart of Colorado has begun what can only be called a late-run on the rails. And, in a surprise development, another possible contender seemed to be ruling himself out — though not unequivocally. His name: Jimmy Carter.

The election is over, long live the election. The president-elect hasn't even arrived in town yet, let alone in the White House, and already the race to succeed him is on. The word from the Republican camp is that Vice-President-elect George Bush will be strongly challenged for the 1984 nomination by the new Senate majority leader, Howard Baker, and the party's exultant chairman, Bill Brock.

Before ruling out a second term for Ronald Reagan, it might perhaps be as well to let him start his first. The nation, only too aware that it has wrought dramatic change, is all anticipation: yet for the two months of the transition period, the U.S. government is on automatic pilot, with Washington a town is suspended animation, torn between high society gossip and Capitol Hill carping.

The president-elect is already fulfilling expectations by leaving the chores of change to his lieutenants. Reagan himself spent the week in retreat at his remote Californian ranch — "mending fences," according to his press secretary, "and clearing trails." Good practice, by the look of things, for what lies ahead of him in Washington.

Squabbling among the many factions of his party is already rife, as the struggle for ascendancy begins. The recent vote against busing in the Senate as an early victory for hard-line over moderate Republicans, and an ominous sign of which group may win the fight for the president's ear.

The southern evangelicals and the conservative "political action committees" have announced other social issues on which they will be pressing the new administration. Edward Kennedy's successor as chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, has launched a campaign to restore capital punishment.

The first "lame duck" session for 32 years convened on Capitol Hill last week, supposed to conclude unfinished business. Six weeks after the fiscal year began, they are still no nearer agreeing a 1981 budget (shelved by the Democrats in September for fear, ironically enough, of electoral damage).

Among those returning from the campaign trail were more than 80 congressmen deprived of their mandate. "Here we come, the endangered species," said one Democratic senator arriving at a meeting of shell-shocked colleagues. "Perhaps," ventured another, "we could get a grant from the Wildlife Federation?"

Humbled or not, the lingering Democratic majority will use its twilight days in power to frustrate all Republican fiscal initiatives. All talk of cooperation on a 1980 tax cut — the incoming administration's most cherished priority — was scotched on Day One. Over at the White House, the lame duck president let it be known he would have vetoed it anyway.

For less than two months the outgoing president will continue to conduct business as usual while around town his successor's advance party sets about dismantling his government. No fewer than 100 Reagan task forces are burrowing around the corridors of power, compiling hit-lists of at least 3,000 Democratic appointees, selecting colleagues and friends to replace them. Saudi Arabian Press Review

All newspapers led with the Arab summit meeting that ended in Amman Wednesday focusing on its success in drawing a collective Arab strategy. The papers said the conference also had drawn an economic joint plan to invest Arab money in the Arab world. The papers also gave prominence to King Khaled's opening of the gas-oil separating plant and the export terminal at Juaymah, which is considered one of the major gas separating plants in the Kingdom.

Okaz led with Crown Prince Fahd's statement after the summit conference. He said the conference's resolutions should dispel the fears of any party and call for the return to the joint Arab work. He said the Arab leaders approved a joint agreement on the regulation of Arab investment in the Arab world. The paper also quoted a spokesman for the conference as saying that an Arab fund for financing economic projects in Arab states had capital of $15 billion.

In another article, the paper quoted Interior Minister Prince Naif as saying in Kuwait that he was surprised by the Palestine Liberation Organizations' absence from the conference in solidarity with Syria. He said he could not find a convenient explanation for their boycott. Meanwhile, most newspapers reported Prince Naif's announcement of a Gulf security agreement between the Kingdom, Kuwait, Bahrain, Qatar, the UAE and Oman.

Al Yom led with King Khaled's opening of the Abu Haidariya to Dammam express highway and the preparations in Hama to receive the King. The paper also said, on the Arab summit, that a Gulf state has presented a request to host the next Arab summit. If agreed upon, it will be the first summit in a Gulf state, the paper added. The paper also reported on the Iraq-Iran conflict and said that the war was raging amid peace moves by the United Nations.

Meanwhile, Al Jazirah led Friday with a banner saying "From now on, our gas will not be flared out." The story quoted King Khaled as saying that the complete takeover of Aramco is a service to citizens locally, and an example of shouldering responsibilities abroad. The paper also gave prominence to a report to be presented to King Khaled by Crown Prince Fahd on the results of the Amman summit. The paper carried on its front page Israel's stopping of schools in the West Bank and Israeli-U.S. consultations on the reported Syrian forces' movements along the border with Jordan.

The newspapers' editorials dealt with the Arab summit, saying that its political and economic resolutions reflect the great responsibilities that Arab leaders shoulder to counter challenges and achieve cherished aspirations. The conference reiterated its support to the PLO as the sole and legal representative of the Palestinian people, in its struggle to retain the occupied land and for self-determination and establishing an independent state. They also re-confirmed the PLO's independence from any Arab or foreign power that exercises any influence over the organization based on special policies and personal ambitions, Al Jazirah stated. The conference had supported Iraq in its demand for its legal rights, and reiterated its rejection of the Camp David accords — the Egyptian regime's fall to the Zionist trap — and Security Council resolution 242 because it does not form a proper base for a solution to the Arab-Israeli conflict.

Thursday's editorials also dwelled on the Arab summit, saying that the conference marked an important stage of the Arab history in facing occupation, racism and Zionism. Okaz said the reasons that moved some Arab countries to boycott the conference are unconvincing to the Arab citizen, and that by not attending the meeting the states have confirmed that there are some parties who do not want Arab solidarity and want the present situation to continue.

Al Medina was more bitter on the absence of those Arab countries. It said that the conference had succeeded because the factors that blocked the way with unfruitful arguments were absent. The paper attacked some of the Arab media that turned their backs on the Zionist enemy and released their poison against a conference whose crime was that it was based on objectivity.

Al Riyadh noted that it is the first time in history that Arabs came out with resolutions that form a strong practical base for a collective work. The Amman summit realized that the achievement of economic integration is the foundation for building an Arab military force depending on Arab capabilities, the paper said. The Kingdom believes that any political action not accompanied by a military plan would simply talk without any practical content.

Al Yom commented in its editorial on Interior

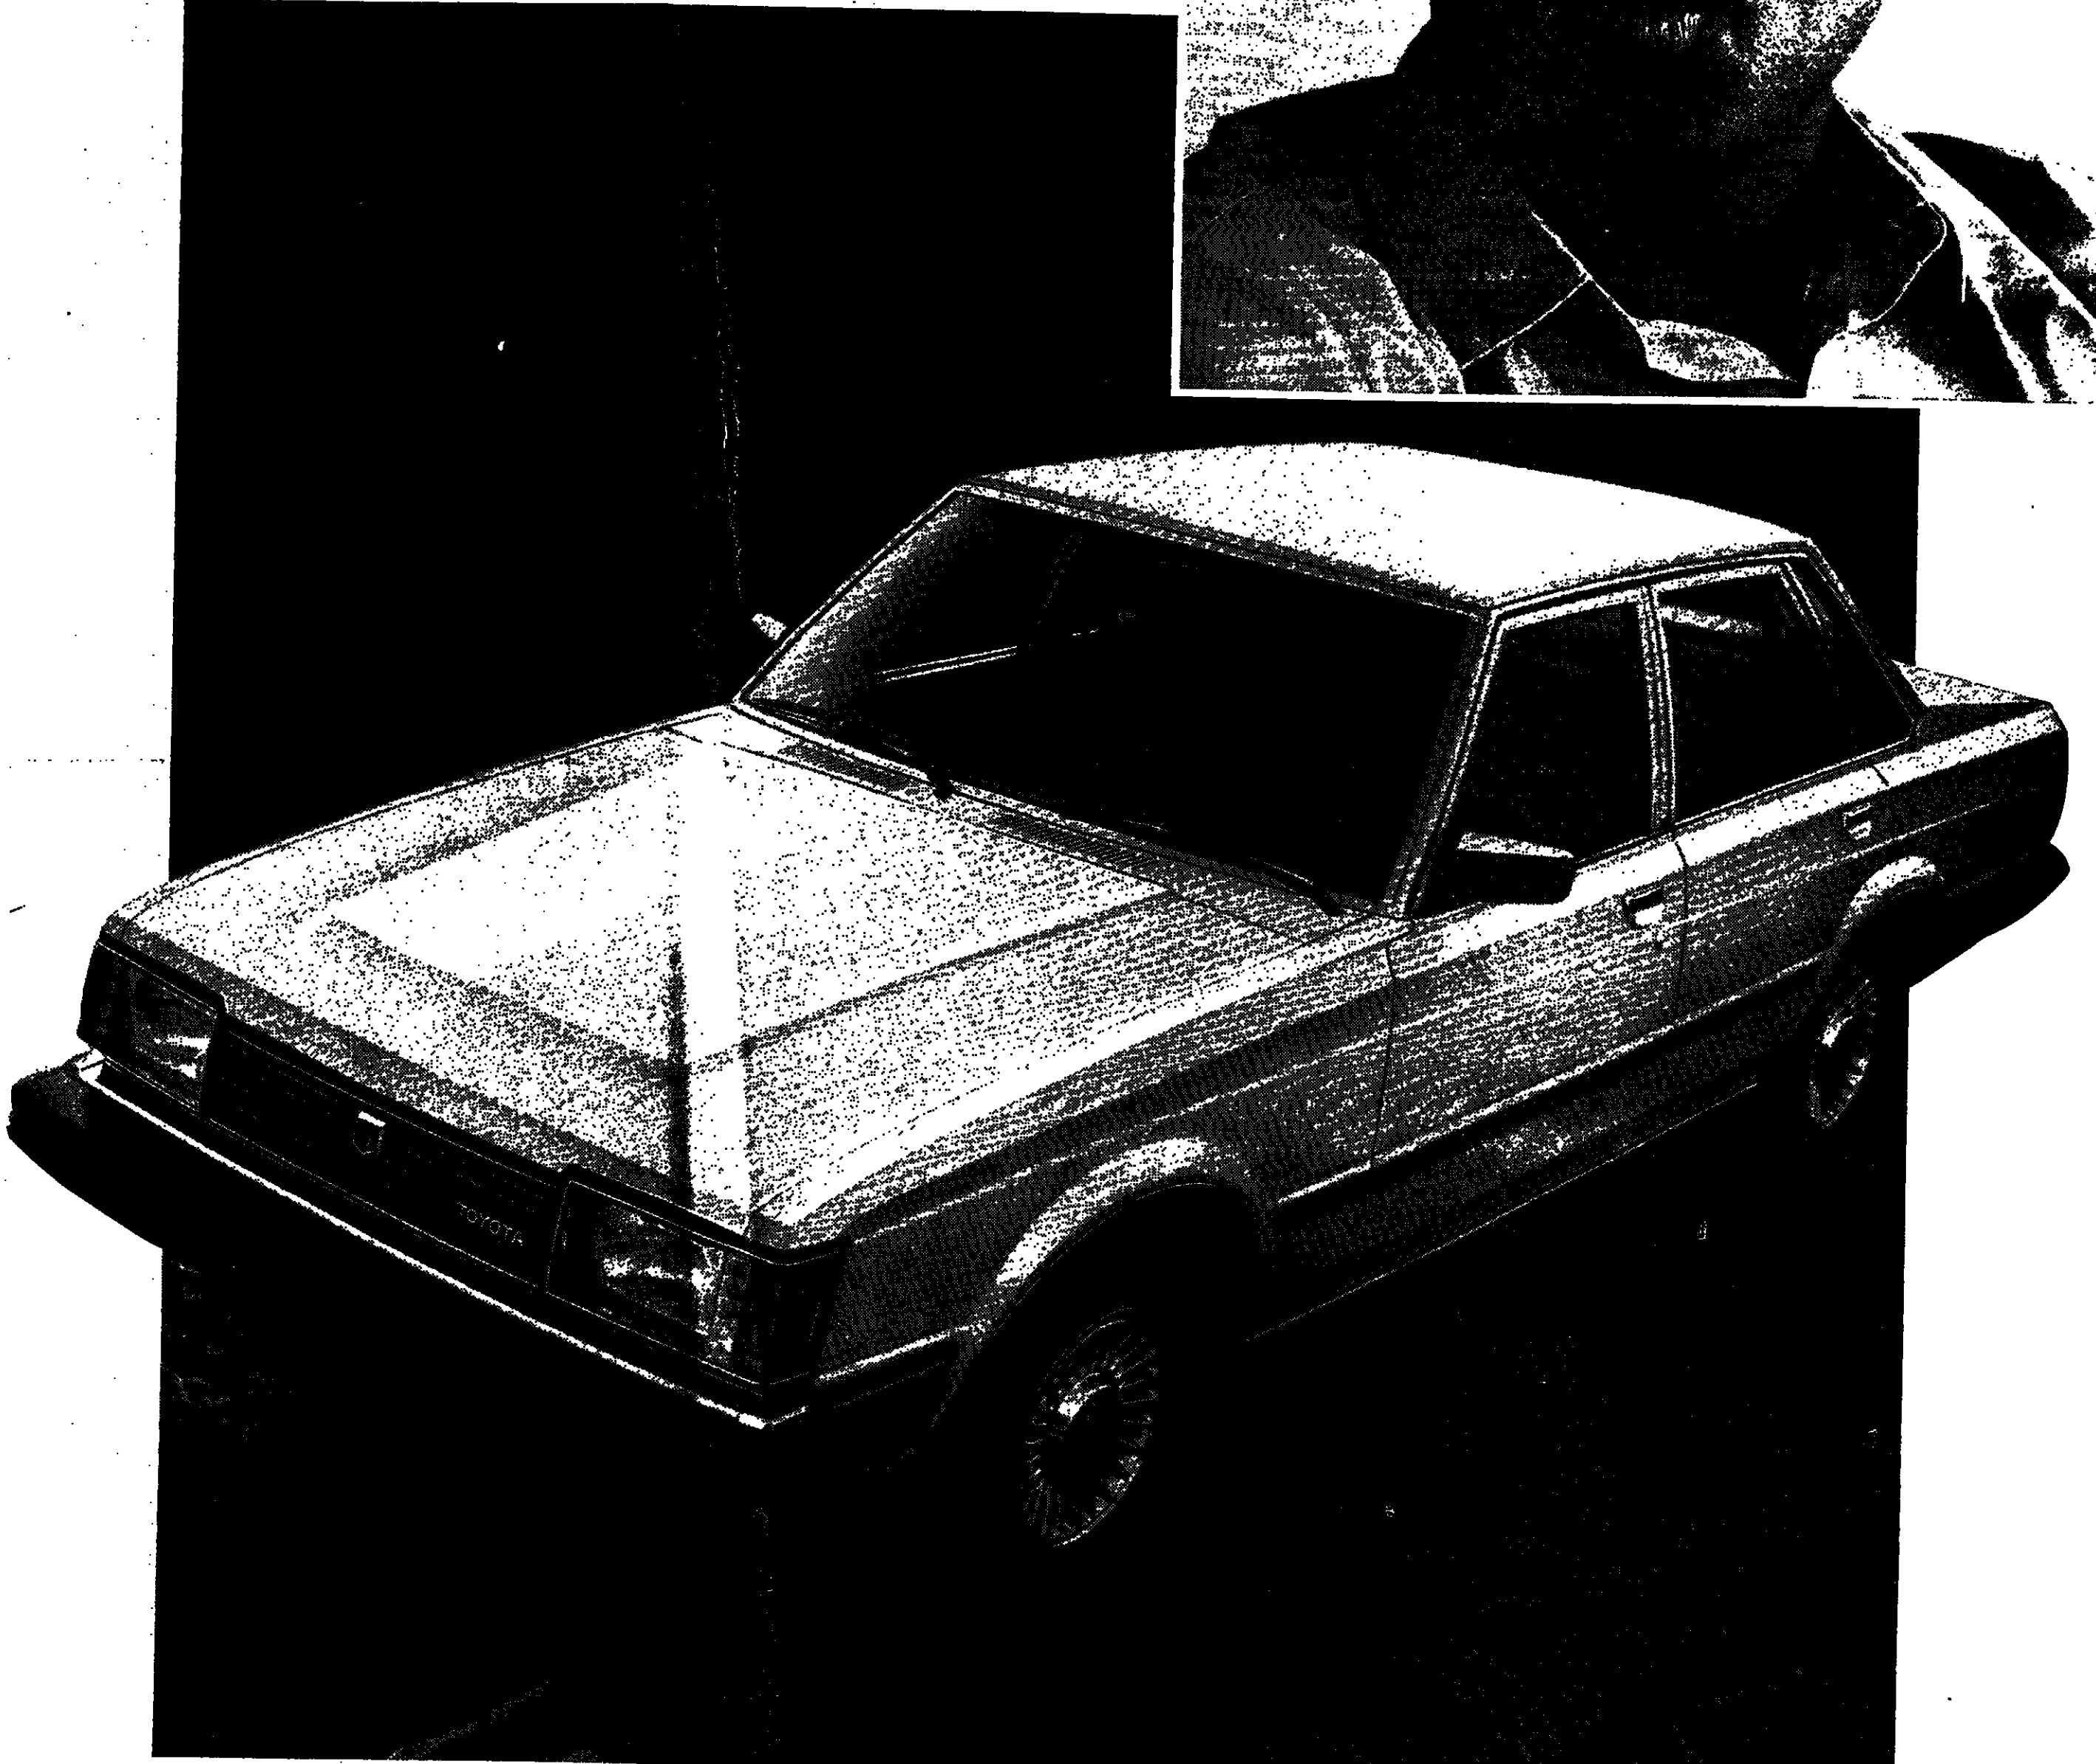

Minister Prince Naif's announcement that Gulf states would soon sign a security agreement. The paper said that the agreement will mark a distinguished development in the relations between Gulf states, especially in the present situation. It went on to say that the issue of Gulf security has become the most urgent issue and needs detailed planning.

Judge throws out 2 Abscam verdicts

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 28 (R) — A judge has quashed the convictions of two Philadelphia councilmen who were found guilty of accepting bribes from bogus Arab businessmen in the so-called Abscam operation.

The judge accepted their attorneys' argument that the local politicians had been trapped by the government into committing crimes. In the Abscam operation, Federal Bureau of Investigation agents posed as Arab businessmen seeking help in immigration and business matters in return for money.

U.S. District Judge John Fullam, who presided over the Abscam trial in September, Wednesday overturned the jury's convictions of George Schwartz, 65, and Harry Jannotti, 56. Schwartz was found guilty on Sept. 16 of one count each of racketeering and bribery.

Undecided on cabinet

Reagan choices to be late

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28 (AFP) — The formation of President-elect Ronald Reagan's cabinet is taking longer than anticipated and the names of its 13 members will probably not be announced before the end of next week.

Reagan's closest adviser Edwin Meese came here from Los Angeles earlier in the week and said that despite two meetings in the Californian city with friends and advisers, the president-elect had not yet chosen the cabinet. For some posts, he said, the list of possible members still contained 10 top 12 names.

Reagan took a break meanwhile, going to his Santa Barbara ranch where he spent Thanksgiving Day with his family. On Monday, following a meeting to try to select cabinet members, Reagan himself confirmed that the work was behind schedule.

He hinted that the formation of the cabinet might not be announced until Dec. 8 when he Jannotti was convicted of one count of bribery but acquitted of a racketeering charge.

During the Abscam trial, FBI videotapes showed Schwartz accepting $34,000 and Jannotti $10,000 from representatives of a mythical Arab businessman alleged to be seeking municipal approval for a $40-million hotel complex in Philadelphia.

Appealing against the verdict, lawyers for the councilmen said their clients' only motive for accepting the money was to draw business to Philadelphia. The lawyers said the councilmen were afraid the businessman would be offended and possibly abandon his project if they refused the bribes.

Legal sources said the reversal of the convictions could harm the government's case against others, including several congressmen and a senator, charged in the Abscam case.

would be in Washington.

Meese did not spell out possible differences between Reagan's advisers. He denied that there were major disagreements or that the ultra-conservative group of the president-elect's old friends was alone in giving its opinion concerning the cabinet.

However, the American press said Reagan may have requested too much advice from too many groups with sometimes greatly differing political philosophies.

The New York Times said in an editorial that this could result in the former California governor trying to compromise with everybody and making up a cabinet that would satisfy nobody. The Washington Post reported that William Simon, treasury secretary under President Richard Nixon, had put direct pressure on Reagan right after the election to announce immediately the names of three cabinet members, including himself.

Amin aide denies story on invasion

NAIROBI, Nov. 28 (R) — Ousted Ugandan dictator Idi Amin is not trying to organize Ugandan exiles to fight the Kampala government, according to his former Finance Minister Brigadier Moses Ali.

Ali, in an interview at his hotel in Nairobi, denied a report in a Kenyan newspaper which said he was Amin's right-hand man and troops loyal to Amin would return to Uganda by the general elections Dec. 10.

He said he was organizing the Uganda National Rescue Front (UNRF) in all countries where there were Ugandan exile communities with the aim of guaranteeing and assisting their return home to live under a democratic government.

"Our organization has nothing to do with Amin directly or indirectly," Ali said. "As far as we know he has not tried to organize or contact any exiles since he fell from power, and has not even shown interest in going home."

Ali said statements by Uganda's ruling military commission that ex-Amin soldiers had invaded the former president's native northeast Uganda last month were not true. The commission had alleged that up to a 3,000 Amin supporters had invaded the West Nile region.

He said subsequent reports from people who had fled the area all showed that the killings in West Nile was being carried out by supporters of former President Milton Obote in army and militia units and there had been no invasion by exiles. The West Nile was now a wasteland. The population of one million had been massacred or had fled, Ali said.

The former minister said the political objective of the killings could be seen in the fact that only candidates from Obote's Uganda People's Congress (UPC) had dared to file nominations this week in this area for the general elections.

A question of cleanliness

Frenchman howls over flight of bumblebee

PARIS, Nov. 28 (AFP) — Honey bees have started an extraordinary "town versus country" dispute in France that has got farmers laughing at city dwellers who seek rural peace, and village folk defending property rights. The whole issue revolves around the question — "Is the honey been clean?"

"No", according to Michel Therouin, a garage-owner in Abbeville with a new country house in picturesque Mareuil, near Rouen, northern France.

"Daft question," according to Kleber Gaillard, local Mareuil bee-keeper, who lives next door to Therouin. "No cleaner insect exists...It will not soil its own hive." And that is the whole problem.

For Therouin and his wife claim that Gaillard's honey bees at some stage must relieve themselves, and do so over their new house, car and trim lawns.

"That is why on June 12, 1975, Gaillard, whose family for the past 40 years has kept 37 beehives, received an official complaint delivered personally by a local court official."

It read: "Mr. and Mrs. Therouin, who live opposite you, empower me to remind you that the flight of your bees to their hives is causing damage to their house and cars parked outside. I must advise you that drops of pollen from your bees are staining the facade and walls of the house and the car bodies."

The Therouin house is 100 meters away from the hives, but separated by the national highway to Rouen. Built in 1973, it is painted all in white. The driveway is tarred and its lawns are well tended. Clearly not the place for bee droppings.

More official complaints were delivered to Gaillard. "Round, yellow and indecible stains" were appearing on the Therouin property and the family washing could not be hung out to dry. There was still damage to the house itself and cars.

On Oct. 10, 1975, the local court at Amiens sent Michel Delanoy to carry out an expert report on the whole series of charges against the beekeeper.

On his return he said that he could see no signs of any stains on the house and concluded that the charge were so "utterly fantastic" that he did not even bother to make any further examinations.

But on May 18, 1976, a court official was called to the Therouin home, and duly drew up a report setting out that three cars belonging to guests were covered in over 100 yellow stains.

On June 21, 1977 a local court ruled that Therouin's complaint was unjustified, acting on a 1908 legal decision that bees belong to no one and there was no proof that the insects came from Gaillard's hives. Therouin was ordered to pay all costs.

He appealed immediately. Three months later, Gaillard died. His colleagues claim that all the worry had caused a heart attack. His widow went on with the little business, which produces an average of 120 kilos of honey annually, and waited three years for the appeal to be heard together with about 1,000 other anxious beekeepers in the region.

Finally, the appeal court gave its verdict — Mrs. Gaillard was ordered to pay $2,000 to the Therouins for damage caused to their property by her bees, although her business was allowed to continue as it was established well before the building of Therouin's house.

Unruly parliament backs Thatcher spending policy

LONDON, Nov. 28 (AP) — Britain's Conservative government won parliamentary backing late Thursday for its economic policy of slashing spending and mopping up the excess to fight inflation.

The vote followed an unruly session to the House of Commons that at one point silenced Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and forced her to sit down. Even some of Mrs. Thatcher's party rank and file, led by former Prime Minister Edward Heath whom she ousted in 1975, joined in attacking the government.

The vote was 319 to 259 on a motion approving the policy outlined by Queen Elizabeth II in a speech opening the new session of parliament one week ago.

Mrs. Thatcher was answering a Laborite opposition charge that the chancellor of the exchequer, Sir Geoffrey Howe, sitting two seats away from her, had misled the House on increases in social security charges to be paid by employers.

Thatcher said she "totally rejected the charge" and called opposition protests "sheer hypocrisy and humbug." She said the new charges on employers and employees had been announced in the same way as by previous labor governments — by a written statement.

Howe got into trouble when, in his statement that employees will have to pay an extra

$2.4 billion in contributions yearly, he did not mention that the employers' share will also rise by $926 million, a heavy burden during the recession. He also understated the employees' contribution by $446 million. His total error was $1.3 billion.

Political correspondents predicted that Howe was in danger of losing his job because of this incident and because he had failed to achieve the government's objectives in restricting money supply. But Howe ignored Laborite shouts of "resign."

S. Africans receive death sentence for treason

PRETORIA, Nov. 28 (R) — Three blacks have been sentenced to death for high treason after a long trial on charges connected with a bank siege and an attack on a police station last January.

Justice Jaap de Villiers of the South African supreme court said the sentences might provoke shock but that the crimes were very serious. One man in the gallery fainted and others wept as the death sentences were announced. There were chaotic scenes when the court adjourned as a screaming crowd surged towards the accused in the dock.

Police struggled to force the crowd out of the Palace of Justice as relatives and friends tearfully tried to shake the hands of the accused. Once outside, the crowds chanted and sang freedom songs.

'Dollarless Americans'

Soviets crowd Viet beaches, cities

HO CHI MINH CITY, Nov. 28 (AP) — Soviet tourists have a new holiday favorite, the hot, sandy beaches of South Vietnam and this bustling town which was once cosmopolitan Saigon.

Many come from icy Siberia, via Vladivostok, according to an East European correspondent. Vietnamese authorities are unwilling to give any details about this unexpected flood of Soviet tourists who seem to be everywhere. But the local Saigonese — who do not seem too smitten with the new tourist trade — are more forthcoming, describing them pitilessly as "dollarless Americans."

These new tourists are met from Hue, the ancient imperial capital to the Damang beaches, always travelling about in compact, tightly-disciplined coach groups. They are all over southern Vietnam, staying safely within the ranks of their own groups whether they are swimming on secluded beaches or eating at reserved tables in restaurants.

Several hotels in Ho Chi Minh City are reserved exclusively for Soviet tourists. If there are too many diners, rooms are requisitioned in other hotels.

Earlier this month a visiting official of an international organization was told to quit his hotel because "a Soviet tourist liner is

Cartoons to warn against N-waste

SEATTLE, Washington, Nov. 28 (AP) — A modern-day Stonehenge etched with cartoons could be the safeguard against nuclear hazards for north Americans 10,000 years from now, says anthropologist David Givens.

The graphics and monoliths he has designed for the U.S. Department of Energy are intended to warn future societies where high-level nuclear waste storage sites are stored. The pictures and captions, along with warning in English, Chinese and French, are something like the caricatures put on poisons so children will know not to try them.

"It's imperative we mark the sites," said the 36-year-old University of Washington academic. "It's a real moral commitment we in 1980 owe to the future."

"You can see what happens when we don't warn people — you have a Love Canal," he said, referring to a Niagara Falls, New York, neighborhood where toxic chemicals began oozing to the surface in a housing project built over a dump site.

"One cartoon shows a large 'X' superimposed over a man drilling at a nuclear waste site. A figure shown prying open a canister is contaminated and turns into a skeleton."

Another shows a man with an exaggerated scowl pointing to canisters behind him.

"If we put (nuclear waste) material down in a mine," he warned, "people in the future mining for salt could drill right through active canisters and release nuclear materials. They could mine tons of salt and not even know it. Unless the site is adequately marked, they'd have no reason to test it for contamination."

expected and we need your room."

The tourists, usually middle-age, walk through the streets here in a double file, headed by a young Vietnamese guide wearing the traditional tunic and silk trousers, with a white-shirted guide in the rear.

They are utterly ignored by the shoe-shine boys and street beggars who are generally so quick to ask all foreigners for a few coins or cigarettes. One woman shrieked "lien xo" (Russian in Vietnamese) as they went by.

However, now and then some of the tourists manage to leave their group to look for

Vietnam still scarred by war

HO CHI MINH CITY, Nov. 28 (AP) — More than five years after the end of the war, the Vietnamese earth still carries the marks of United States occupation.

Anybody who tours the south and center of Vietnam comes upon the disemboweled carcasses of tanks at roadsides and bizarre scrapheaps of destroyed vehicles and helicopters. These wrecks, utterly worthless after being picked clean of spare parts or valuable metals like copper and lead, are mute evidence of Washington's massive and unsuccessful ten-year war effort. The effort in 1968 involved 500,000 U.S. troops.

North of Hue, the former royal capital, is the former 17th parallel frontier and "demilitarized zone" (DMZ). There is a noticeable lack of vegetation. Newly-planted trees barely reach waist-height.

Vietnamese call these arid regions the "white earth." They were stripped by the defoliants and chemical products dropped by the U.S. Air Force to destroy hiding places for their enemies. In the new province of which Hue was the capital and which includes the DMZ, more than 2,000 people have mistakenly triggered old 200 of those people died.

Hundreds of hectares of farm land can still not be used because of mines. Con Thiem was an American support base 30 kms from the 17th parallel before marines were besieged in it in 1967 and 2,500 shells fell on it daily.

Five years after the end of the war, the

Tokyo degree dealer earns $4m

TOKYO, Nov. 28 (AP) — Tokyo police have raided the offices of a business firm fronting as a university which allegedly has made a fortune by selling fake doctoral degrees.

Police said Sakae Matsushige, 66, president of "Patent University," is under investigation on suspicion of violating the false personation law for his operation of selling doctorates of medicines engineering or economics to anyone who could pay the price. Since opening his class-less university in 1964 Matsushige has made $4.7 million selling doctoral degrees to more than 1,000 people, mainly company owners and doctors seeking an extra title for their door plates.

The degrees, bestowed in cap and gown antiques in the Rue Khoi (General Uprising Street), allowed to re-open only a few months ago. Inside one shop a Soviet tourist was trying to barter an aeroflot flag and calendar for an 18th century porcelain tobacco jar. Another antiquarian, who specializes in the Ming dynasty period, was offered a Soviet short in exchange for one of his finest pieces.

"It was not even a silk shirt, but nylon," the expert complained.

The Soviet tourists are given some night entertainment through the good offices of the official "Vietnam-Tourism" bureau which organizes a dance for them every Saturday.

bunkers are still there, barely covered by vegetation and some of them are intact, littered with used shell-cases and ammunition boxes. An armored M-13 troops carrier, overturned by a direct hit, lies rusted nearby and a 105mm howitzer with a twisted barrel emerges from the high elephant grass.

A few kilometers to the south is Dong Ha, a former U.S. giant marine operational base. Its buildings, empty and dismantled, are still protected by rusty barbed wire covering the soil. But sometimes, between rows of barbed wire, a rice field has been planted.

Along the highway leading from the former Saigon to Vung Thau (once the French colonial resort of Cap Saint Jacques) there are strange surrealistic skeleton-like silhouettes. They are watchtowers, built to guard a huge arms depot.

On the nearby beach, there is the rotting hulk of a smashed landing-barge. The Vietnamese authorities have tried to recover oil and valuable scrap metal. At Tan Son Nhut, the capital's airport, there are plane hulks with broken blades piled up only a few hundred meters from runways which during the war were once the most crowded in the world.

Nearby are the dynamited ruins of the U.S. "Pentagon East" where the American high command planned war moves. Today there are only concrete relics of these once majestic signs of U.S. military power.

ceremonies, were priced from about $2,380 for a doctorate of economics which is not under the jurisdiction of the national education law to $23,800 for a doctorate of medicine, which is, they said.

Matsushige also gave free degrees to noted politicians such as former Prime Minister Takeo Fukuda, who has photographed with Matsushige or the cover of the university brochure. Fukuda said Tuesday he had met the degree seller only once years ago and was "deeply perturbed" by the photo.

Matsushige defended his enterprise, telling Japanese reporters that "once people secure good housing and good food there naturally arises a need to obtain greater fame and status."

As Gulf war continues

EEC uses oil stocks to avoid price rise

BRUSSELS, Nov. 28 (R) — The Nine European Common Market (EEC) countries have agreed to use their high oil stocks to prevent the Gulf war from causing major increases in petroleum prices and called on other industrial countries to follow them. "We have it in our power to prevent an oil price increase," EEC energy commissioner Etienne Davignon said Thursday. "We all have to act together."

EEC oil ministers agreed on the plan to draw on their stocks as a contingency measure if spot market prices start to rise because of shortages created by the Iran-Iraq conflict. The fighting between the two countries has virtually halted their oil exports, leaving a shortfall in oil supplies only partly replaced by another production in other oil states.

Summer drought endangers $1b peanut industry in U.S.

ATLANTA, GEORGIA, Nov. 28 (AP) — A devastating summer drought so endangered the United States' billion-dollar peanut industry that federal officials, for the first time in 25 years, are considering opening the U.S. market to imported peanuts. Even the National peanut growers group, which represents 14 state and regional grower organizations in the "peanut belt" and has fought an open market, grudgingly is supporting limited imports.

"Many of my farmers are opposed to this, period. But the national leadership feels to keep our share of the market and to not lose shelf space that this recommendation had to be made," said Tyrone Spearman, executive director of the Georgia Peanut Commission, which represents growers in the largest peanut-producing state.

The summer drought destroyed 42 per cent of the U.S. peanut crop, the U.S. agriculture department has said. The peanut butter and nut Processors Association and the National Confectioners Association has asked the International Trade Commission to consider easing limits on imported peanuts during a hearing scheduled to begin Monday. President Jimmy Carter would have to make the final decision on the limits, first imposed in 1953 to protect domestic peanut prices and last lifted in 1955.

The two groups have warned that U.S. peanut shortages could cause sharp price increases of peanut butter and other peanut products and widespread layoffs, plant closings and a shortage of peanut products on supermarket shelves.

"There is no doubt prices are going to increase," said a government market analyst who asked to be identified. Growers group spokesman Ross Wilson said the growers would ask for several limitations on the imports, including a ban on imports until the domestic crop is completely sold.

West Germans urged to tighten belts to face mounting deficit

BONN, Nov. 28 (R) — West Germans were warned by the government Friday they must tighten their belts if the country was to tackle its mounting payments deficit and other major economic problems. Economics Minister Otto Lambsdorff, speaking in the Bundestag (parliament), said the time was over when Germans could expect to earn increasingly high pay for working less and less.

Is it so bad if we have to tighten our belts one notch? he asked.

Lambsdorff's message was clearly directed at the millions of workers whose unions will start a new round of annual wage negotiations in the new year. Government and independent forecasters have said West Germany's chances of avoiding a lasting recession will depend, among other things, on the level of pay settlements.

Lambsdorff echoed a speech Monday by Chancellor Helmut Schmidt who declared that German industry's major chance lay in innovation and competitiveness. He said export successes were needed to help curb the payments deficit, but as the soaring cost of oil imports was the main cause of the problem the answer had to be sought first in energy policy.

TEHRAN, (R) — Iranian representatives will attend next month's Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) ministerial meeting in Bali, Indonesia, the official Pars News Agency reported Thursday. The reports contrasted with a statement in Jakarta Wednesday by Indonesian Oil Minister Subroto that Iran had said it would not attend the price-setting session scheduled for Dec. 15 while Iraq would do so.

LONDON, (AFP) — Production of British Leyland's mini-metro car was back to normal this week at Longbridge, outside Birmingham, after a dispute over buying-in the seats for the car from an outside firm. When the management ordered the seats from outside, upholstery workers went on strike last Friday. Other workers were laid off as a result.

LIVERPOOL, (AFP) — The Ford Motor Company management this week halted production of the "Escort" car at Halewood, Merseyside, and laid off 2,500 assembly line workers without pay. The management said the lay-off was due to a production halt stemming from the suspension of 22 assemblers who, the management said, refused to carry out a foreman's instructions.

Knicks' Russell hammers former team

NEW YORK, Nov. 28 (AP) — It's a common scenario in sports: a key player for many years in one city is traded and inevitably he returns to that city in an enemy uniform. The resulting performance, however, is unpredictable.

As New York Knicks coach Red Holzman said, "They either react greatly or tighten up."

Campy Russell played in Cleveland for the first time as a player for the Knicks Wednesday night after six years as a stalwart for the Cavaliers, and scored 30 points, including eight in overtime as New York won the National Basketball Association game 119-113.

"He's an old-time pro," said Holzman. "We're pleased with him. He's given us an added dimension — another forward who can pass the ball. He's also giving us our best defensive play at forward. He knows what to do."

"It was just a normal game for me, just one of 82," said the 6-foot-8 forward. "The real fun was being able to come back and see my family."

76ers 101, Rockets 100
Julius Erving scored 23 points and blocked a shot by Allen Leavell in the closing seconds to preserve the victory by Philadelphia, which has the league's best record at 21-3.
Suns 113, SuperSonics 103
Phoenix, the second-best team in the NBA

at 19-4, got 26 points from Truck Robinson and 23 from Dennis Johnson and pulled ahead in the third quarter with the help of four Seattle technicals.

Spurs 125, Bulls 122
George Gervin equaled his average with 27 points, but Mark Olberding and substitute center Dave Corzine both were far above their norms as each scored 24 for San Antonio to pace the victory over Chicago.

Celtics 126, Blazers 101
Larry Bird and Robert Parish keyed a 39-point blitz in the first period that carried Boston over Portland.

Bird scored 10 of his game-high 24 points and Parish nine of his 21 as the Celtics built a 39-18 lead and coasted as the Trail Blazers lost for the 15th time in a row on the road since last spring.

Pacers 110, Hawks 89
Indiana, who had never been over .500 at any point in its four previous NBA seasons, climbed to a 13-10 mark, with Billy Knight scoring 23 points.

Jazz 104, Pistons 97
Leading NBA scorer Adrian Dantley poured in 35 points to lead Utah over Detroit.

Utah took a 96-79 lead in the fourth quarter before the Pistons, who got 28 points from Phil Hubbard, made it close at the end.

Kings 118, Nets 100
Kansas City got 23 points from Otis Birdsong and 21 more from Scott Wedman to easily outclass New Jersey.

Nuggets 113, Clippers 109
Alex English scored 28 points, but it was inspired floor play by rookie guard Carl Nicks that paced Denver over San Diego.

Uninspired play marks Ittihad, Ahli soccer tie

By Laurie Thomas

JEDDAH, Nov. 28 — A goal-less draw allowed Ittihad to keep its unbeaten record, and Ahli to gain a valuable league point as the two rival Jeddah teams fought out the first of their league encounters at the Jeddah Stadium, Thursday.

Unconvincing performances from both teams disappointed the near capacity crowd, whose vocal support brought a carnival atmosphere to the stadium, and who must wait until the return match to decide the Jeddah "champion".

Ittihad dominated most of the match, but relied too heavily on long balls to Tamim to provide the breakthrough. Bukuer was ineffective in midfield, not providing the control and support to allow Tamim and Abu Samara to pressure the solid Ahli defense.

Ahli, without injured strikers Dabbi, Amadi and Khojaji, also had nothing original to offer near the Ittihad goal. Meriki frequently came from defense to support the attack on the left flank, but this provided only minimal pressure.

Both keepers, brothers Adil and Alla Rawas, were untested for almost the whole match, having only to collect the occasional long distance shot or high cross. However, it was a mistake by Alla Rawas which provided the best chance of the first half. He fumbled a catch and only a desperate clearance by an Ittihad defender stopped Yehia putting Ahli in front.

Ittihad continued to dominate the early part of the second half. Tamim tried to find openings down the left wing and a 53rd minute cross gave Samara a chance but his shot sailed high over the open goal. Bukuer also fired high seven minutes later when Samara ball gave him a clear shot from the edge of the penalty area.

The threat of Tamim and Zeno was shown to be empty and ineffective in what turned out a mediocre match. Both teams appeared more concerned in not losing rather than winning.

Tamim patrolled by Jandubi, whose pre-match prediction that he would cancel Tamim's effectiveness proved to be completely accurate, and Zeno, like Bukuer, played too deep to give the lone Sagir the necessary support.

Dittmar Crammer and Geroge Vivera, Ittihad and Ahli coaches, respectively, will certainly be forced to review their tactics if either team is to continue a credible challenge for the championship title.

Aoki leading golf classic

OGAWA, Japan, Nov. 28 (AP) — Isao Aoki, Japan's internationally-known pro, broke away from two co-leaders with a five-under par 67 Friday and took a four-stroke lead halfway through the $162,000 Gene Sarazen-Jun Golf Classic.

The 38-year-old Aoki, who has won four tournaments this year, had a 36-hole total of 135, nine under par, on the 6434-meter par 72 Jun Classic Country Club course, north of Tokyo.

Aoki, who was tied with Japanese pros Takaaki Konno and Michiyuki Kawanami going into the second round, scored seven birdies against two bogeys in a game played under cloudy skies.

Spain's Severiano Ballesteros, 1980 U.S. Masters champion, was alone in the second spot with a two-round total of 139, after shooting an even-par 70. Ballesteros started Friday's round one stroke behind Aoki.

First rounds co-leader Konno was tied for third place with two other Japanese at 141.

kommo shot a one-over par 73.
Sixty-six players, who survived the halfway cut at 149, will compete in the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday in pursuit of the first prize money of $32,000.

Three foreign players, Swede Bjorn Friberg failed to qualify for the championship rounds. Knudson had a 150 total, Simpson, a 153 and Freiberg a 168.

THAT'S IT: Sugar Ray Leonard, right, reacts on learning that Roberto Duran is calling it quits in round eight of Duran's defense of his World Boxing Council welterweight crown Tuesday night. Leonard had held the title previously.

Hope-Leonard bout may be in the works

LONDON, Nov. 28 (AFP) — Maurice Hope could make a fortune in the spring by fighting the restored world welterweight champion Sugar Ray Leonard, the London promoter Mickey Duff said after the Leonard Roberto Duran fight.

Both men won their fights on the double bill in the early hours of this morning. Hope retained the light-middleweight championship by outpointing Carlos Herrera of Argentina at Wembley.

Leonard, one division down, regained the welterweight title with the retirement of Robert Duran in New Orleans, and Duff flew to America late this week hoping to set the wheels in motion for the winners to meet.

But, Duff is quick to admit that there is no chance of the contest taking place in Britain.

There were moments last night, however, when it seemed that Duff's journey would not be necessary and Hope himself confessed that he had never finished a contest in such a state of exhaustion.

This he blamed on an attack of flu two weeks ago which put him to bed for four days and raised the possibility of a postponement.

Despite his problems Hope won a unanimous points decision and Duff judged that the Duran-Leonard flop would reflect his performance favorably and that the Americans would remember the double bill for Hope's courage in the last few rounds rather than Leonard's hollow victory.

"I cannot see another logical opponent and Maurice certainly enhanced his reputation last night. While I feel sorry for the customers who paid 500 pounds ringside to watch Duran and Leonard in New Orleans, what happened was a dream result for us. If it had been a great fight there could have been another return. Now, the thing is wide open," said Duff.

Duran fought like 'amateur'

NEW YORK, Nov. 28 (AP) — "I think Roberto Duran looked like an amateur and people can't accept it," Sugar Ray Leonard said, the morning after beating the Latin legend who spent the night in the hospital following his welterweight title loss and his announced retirement from the ring.

Duran checked out of the hospital Wednesday and returned to his hotel, which was within sight of the Superdome, where he quit in the eighth round against Leonard Tuesday night. It was a shocking ending to the fight and to a brilliant career.

"Everybody had me losing this fight," Leonard said at a news conference. "They had this man a living legend. I beat this so-called living legend, and now they find excuses. I beat Roberto Duran."

The 24-year-old Leonard answering a question about whether he thought Duran had quit, replied, "I do," adding "but with all this talk, I think he took the worst way out. I think he did what he thought was best and gave up."

But Leonard showed compassion for Duran, calling him a great fighter and indicating that he was just outsmarted. "He was upset, Roberto Duran lost his composure. He was completely upset," said Leonard.

"We had the fight figured to frustrate him," said trainer Angelo Dundee.

"One thing bothers me with this," said Dundee, who was in the corner when Muhammad Ali quit on his stool in the 10th round against heavyweight champion Larry Holmes in their recent title fight. "The word quit. It shouldn't be used with Roberto Duran. He's a great fighter. If he says something was the matter with him, there was. I hope nothing is wrong with the guy. I'm worried about the guy. He's a great credit to boxing."

The 29-year-old Duran said after the fight that he had cramps in his stomach and right arm, and felt too weak to continue.

Both Dundee and Leonard said that Duran had trouble making the 147-pound weight limit, although he came in at 146. Dundee said he understood that Duran's weight had ballooned to 168 since he outpointed Leonard June 20 at Montreal to win the World Boxing Council title. He weighed 145½ that night.

Asked if he could conceive of himself quitting in the ring, Leonard said, "I wouldn't quit. I would never give up... But it depends on what the situation is. If the man is hurt internally..."

Leonard added that "I know for a fact he didn't know if and when he could catch up on me. He was totally confused."

Duran was only two points behind on each of two officials cards and one point on the third, but Leonard unquestionably was in command of the fight. He was using his hand and foot speed to great advantage and negating Duran's bullying tactics and keeping the defending champion from pinning him on the ropes.

The sudden ending left the crowd in a state of shock. Even the referee couldn't believe that Duran had given up. Once Duran walked away, he waved him back, but again Duran turned his head and Leonard threw a right to the body. Then, it dawned on everyone that the man called "Hands Stone" was finished.

"I'm retiring from boxing right now," said Duran, a Latin legend and a Panamanian national hero. "There will be no more fights. I'm tired of fighting."

Bullit demolishes yacht field

AUCKLAND, Nov. 28 (AFP) — The French yacht Bullit has won the world quarter-ton yachting championship which finished here Friday morning.

Bullit crossed the finishing line in the final race on the 250 mile offshore course, more than half an hour ahead of her nearest rival to record her fourth win of the five race series and comfortably take the world title for France for the second year in succession.

Second yacht home Friday was Ancher Challenge of New Zealand, which had an eight minutes lead on Bullit at one stage, and third was another local entry, Hot Number, a further 11 minutes astern.

Bullit was sailed by her designer Jacques Fauroux of Cannes and her co-owners, Dominique Caparros and his sister Irene, of the yacht Club D'Antibes on the French Riviera.

All three sailed a slightly smaller yacht of the same name which won the world title in Italy last year, and they also won the world three-quarter-ton title for France earlier this year in the Fauroux-designed Malgine.

The fourth member of the Bullit crew was Frederic Laffitte of Antibes whose knowledge of the local Auckland's conditions gained from competing here three years ago greatly helped his team to its win.

Women Open nears end

MELBOURNE, Nov. 28 (AP) — Top-seeded Hana Mandlikova, Martina Navratilova and Wendy Turnbull as well as unseeded Mima Jausovec will play Saturday for a place in the finals of the Australia Open women's tennis championship here.

The four quarterfinal singles matches Friday all went to three sets.

Bidding Quiz

You deal and open the bidding with One Heart on the following hand:

♠10 ♥KQ974 ♦KJ5 ♣AJ63

What would you bid next if partner responded with:

- One spade.
- One notrump.
- Two clubs.
- Two diamonds.
- Two hearts.

considering the danger implicit in the singleton spade — and it is therefore best to bid two clubs, hoping to find a better landing spot.

3. Three clubs. This is a straight value bid showing club support and a hand of the minimum class that has increased in stature because of the trump fit. Change the king of hearts to the ace and you would have full value for a raise to four clubs.

4. Three diamonds. A good case can also be made for bidding three clubs, but this might lead to complications difficult to resolve. On balance, the simple raise — which tells partner you have diamond support — is probably the most accurate description of the hand.

5. Three clubs. The possible rebids are three hearts, three clubs and pass. The absolute limit of the hand may be nine or even eight tricks. At the same time, though, allowance must be made for the possibility of making ten tricks if partner has the right hand.

Three clubs is more informative than three hearts and is therefore the better choice. It establishes a base that allows partner to bid three or four hearts, depending on how he re-evaluates his hand.

Frances Drake

FOR SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 23, 1980

What kind of day will tomorrow be? To find out what the stars say, read the forecast given for your birth sign.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) ♈
A hectic day is both productive and nerve-racking. You're in the mood to take a chance, but a more conservative course is appropriate.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) ♉
The affairs of children could wear you out. Learn to pace yourself, or recreation will become grueling. Don't overdo healthwise.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) ♊
You're here and there and everywhere but may not have much to show for it. A loved one will prove to be a stabilizing influence.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) ♋
Watch a tendency to talk too much on the phone. You could exhaust yourself in the planning of activities. Get routine tasks done.

LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22) ♌
Watch yourself in regard to spending because you could overdo it. Seek less taxing entertainments, or your health will suffer.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22) ♍
Others may cross you on the slightest thing. Home life is favoured over costly entertainments. You're inclined to splurge in some way.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) ♎
Interruptions could interfere with sleep or privacy. You may be grumpy. You'll enjoy a visit with an old friend.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) ♏
Social life is not without aggravation. Do your best not to let others get to you. In the p.m., you'll be in the mood for privacy.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) ♐
Community life has both ups and downs. A career proposal may have some strings attached. Seek the company of loyal friends.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19) ♑
Mix-ups are likely in connection with travel. Be low-key about business concerns. Avoid risks. Stick with the tried and true.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18) ♒
Joint assets could be an area of dissension. Shopping tours may lead to disagreements. Keep travel plans within affordable limits.

PISCES (Feb. 19 to Mar. 20) ♓
Try to be cooperative with close ties. Watch ideological disputes. Stay clear of wild investment schemes. Be conservative.
